Quiz: Module 2, Lesson 2.5 - Customizing Your Agent’s Personality

Questions

Question 1

Which file would you edit to give your agent a specific name and role?

A) USER.md B) AGENTS.md C) IDENTITY.md D) config.yaml

Question 2

What is the purpose of the SOUL.md file?

A) To define technical settings B) To define the agent’s personality, values, and behavioral principles C) To store user information D) To configure memory settings

Question 3

What should you do if your agent’s personality doesn’t match your configuration?

A) Delete all configuration files B) Check that files are properly formatted and restart OpenClaw C) Switch to a different AI model D) Accept the default personality

Question 4

What approach is recommended for customizing agent personality?

A) Copy someone else’s configuration exactly B) Design to match your style and complement your weaknesses C) Use only the default settings D) Make random changes without testing

Question 5

How often should you review and adjust your agent's personality configuration?

A) Never - set it once and leave it B) Only when something breaks C) After the first week, then periodically based on experience D) Every single session

---

Answers

Question 1: C IDENTITY.md is where you define your agent's name, role, creature type, vibe, and other identity characteristics.

Question 2: B SOUL.md defines the agent's personality, core truths, communication style, values, and working style - the "character" of the agent.

Question 3: B If your agent's personality doesn't match expectations, check that IDENTITY.md and SOUL.md are properly formatted, that files are in the correct location, and restart OpenClaw after making changes.

Question 4: B The recommended approach is to design your agent's personality to match your communication style and complement your weaknesses - if you tend to be too detailed, make your agent more concise.

Question 5: C You should review and adjust after the first week of use, then periodically based on your experience. Your agent's personality should evolve as your relationship develops.